On the PSA Website

Links on the Website

The PSA website, when possible, provides links for its users to go directly to another location on the website without having to retype a website URL. There are three types of links that a user may encounter: to a website page (on the PSA site or on another site), to an email address, or to a downloadable file. Depending upon your particular browser and the way your computer is setup, this may result in very different actions after you click the link.

How to Tell if an Item is Linked

Most text links on the PSA website will appear in a bright red color, with the text in bold. If text is in a burgundy box with white writing, that box will also be linked. Some browsers, such as Chrome, will allow you to preview if text or an object is linked by hovering your mouse over it. For a hot link (one that will produce an action), your mouse pointer may change to a hand with an extended pointer figure and/or a preview of what the link is may appear above the link or somewhere on the bottom of your page.

Links to Website Pages

We try to limit links to website pages within the text of a page because they are hard to locate when we need to update them. There are two exceptions to this: the Exhibition lists and the PSA-member club links. Exhibition page links are provided to us by our Exhibition Standard Directors. Some of these links are not active when listed, especially those listed more than 3 months in advance of the exhibition's closing date. We try to update information on exhibition links when possible.

Club links are provided by PSA-member clubs when they join and updated by the clubs when and/or if they change. Those links, for the most part, are current and only occasionally change after they are listed here.

Links to Email Addresses

Officers, directors, and chairs of PSA activities are usually listed with their names linked directly to their emails. In most cases, names appear with a mail symbol before them: That symbol is there to remind you that the name is linked to an email but even without that symbol, a mouse hover would show that it is linked. (We are currently adding that symbol to all linked names on the PSA website.) Clicking a linked name will cause your computer's default email program to open up and put the person's name automatically in the "To" field. If your computer has not selected a default email, clicking the name will produce no action. Check your computer's preferences to configure your default email.

Links to Files

There are three types of files that may be accessed when a file link is chosen: pdfs (.pdf), documents (.doc), and Excel files (.xls). We try to list the type of file you will get if you click the link right next to it so you'll be prepared. The way your computer reacts to the file will be dependent upon how your preferences were set and the browser you are using. For example, clicking a pdf may result in the file opening immediately in a pdf reader while clicking a document may result in it being downloaded to a downloads file and waiting for you to manually open it. If nothing happens when you click a file link, check your downloads file before assuming you didn't get the file.

Links that don't link

Having issues with a link that doesn't behave as it should? We'd like to know about it! Send broken link issues to webmaster@psa-photo.org and we'll try to get them fixed for you asap. ■
